COME, STOP YOUR BLUFFING.

Danille Tun Everiso Wonto's liberal offer our esteemed evening contemporary, with a persistent and fatuous fondness for bluffing. still maintains this cheerful legend at the od of its editorial column :

The Circulation of the EVENING BUN is larger than that of any other ng paper in the United States.

The non-acceptance of our friendly offer, lowever, leads disinterested observers to the don that the Evening Sun recognises but is too coy to admit that the circulation of Tun. Evening World is at least 25 per sent, greater than its own.

But we will not be mean about this matter. The Boming Hun shall have another chance. The offer is revised as follows :

Eventure World hereby agrees to pay 2000 in each to the Press Club's charity of M. upon thorough examination, its bons mistion is not found to be every day in the week at least 30 per cent, larger than of the Bussing Sun-three prominent

And, if this generous offer is not accepted thin the constitutional limit of ten days, we shall increase the percentage again.

NOW CAN THEY RESITATE? How can any member of the Legislature to about supporting the Children's

In its favor stand arrayed the Judges of the Supreme Court, the Republican party as ented by its Committee, the Democratio party as represented by Tammany Hall and the County Democracy, the citizens of New York in mass-meeting assembled and the Public!

Against it stands only the bureaucratic opsition of a few societies!

THIS PICTURE AND THAT.

After escuring a disagreement of the trial jusy in the cases of some of the indicted boodlers, the middle-aged gentleman (Fri-Lows) in the District-Attorney's office bas actually succeeded in getting an acquittal. This is not surprising, however.

After securing the conviction of the Boss Boodler and of some of his satellites, the young man (Nicoll) who used to be in the District-Attorney's office has gone on rooting out secondrels and dragging public thieves to justice in the market investigation. This is not surprising, however.

But it is just as well for the taxpayers to look on that picture and then on this.

TRIUMPHANT AMERICAN SKILL.

WELLIAM G. GRACE, of England is the greatest cricketer in the world. Next to seball, the majority of English-speaking people think cricket the greatest game in the world. It is a big thing to have pre-eminent skill in the world's greatest games.

The American baseball player RYAN, on an exhibition trial at Bristol yesterday, oftehed a dozen balls to W. G. GRACE. The cricket champion hit only one of them.

Eleven misses out of a possible twelve by the champion oricketer, measured by the work of a baseball player who is by no means the champion pitcher, indicate, what has so often been claimed, that as requiring quicker spe, surer stroke and livelier muscles, baseball beats cricket all round the bases. Hursh for the American game !

He ought to think about his English detectives in regard to the Whitechapel murders. Why did they not solve that mystery? Simply because they are not as "loxy" as the Americans. Mr. Bowden does not know about our shrewd American detectives.

The Snake Still Lives.

In the Snoke Editor of The Evening World. You ask: " Can snakes live in Ireland?" They can. I have a box of Irish soil with shamrock growing in it. When I read your question in The Evening World I resolved question in The Evening World I resolved to try it. I obtained a healthy snake and but it in the box. That was on March 9. Today I took the glass case from over the box. The snake was coiled up in the middle asleep. Inish. March 16.

The Negative Again.

In the Sunks Editor of The Evening World: Having been attracted by your novel inquiry in The Evenino World, "Can Shakes Live in Ireland." I can answer with the utmost veracity—they cannot. I have visited the Zoological Gardens on several occasions and have never seen a snake exhibited there. This not only applies to shake but to any other poisonous reptile. But some piaces in Ireland are named as if such reptiles once existed there, as, for instance, the "Adder's Pot" and "Enake's Lair." But you can travel every inch of Ireland, from Fair Head in Antrim to Mizen Head in Cork, and from Howth Head in Dublin to Slyne Head in Galway and not find a single prisonous reptile. # A Series of Curious Experiments.

to the Snake Editor of The Evening World:
Your snake talks in relation to Ireland have interested me greatly. I have devoted much thought and labor upon the question and as a result will say that snakes cannot live in Ireland. The following personally conducted experiments are proof. A large black snake was taken to Ireland. A thick paste was made of plaster of Paris, silicate of soda and stratena. The snake's head was covered about an inch thick with this raste so that no traces of air could get at it. In a ahert time that snake was dead. Irish air had nothing to do with it, as the snake could inhale no Irish air.

hale no Irish air.

A second snake was taken. Iron wire made in Pittsburg. Pa., was wrapped around its neck and tail; by these wire, the snake was suspended from a snakewood tree (imported from West Virginia). In a few short hours that snake was dead. Irish soil had nothing to do with it, as the snake did not come into contact with Irish soil. A third experiment was tried. A small box was made by joining together pieces of wood taken out of a cypress awamp in Florida (over which snakes had often been seen crawling). This box was partly filled with earth taken out of prairie dogs' burrows. Then several snakes were placed in this box and kept in it in America for some years, so that the box might become saturated, so to speak, with "snakishness."

This box was then taken to Ireland, snakes placed in it, and then all the air taken out by means of an air pump. Even then the snakes died.

This proves conclusively that there is some.

This proves conclusively that there is some thing else in Ireland outside of air and soil

I then tried another series of experiments. An air tight box was taken, some snakes put in and then taken to Ireland. As much air was sumped into the box as we could with a small hand-rump. ### Taking a Practical View of It.

To the Enake Editor of the Evening World; The Irish snake controversy seems to be drawing to a close, but it is unfortunate that most of the reasons adduced for the absence or scarcity of reptiles in the Green Isle are too childish or superstitious for serious contoo childish or superstitious for serious con-sideration. That given by a correspondent in The Eventso World of Thursday is prob-ably the true cause. Ireland owing to its geographical position is no oriously the wet-test and most sunless country in Europe, and stakes demand, above all things, warmth and sunshine. The fact is incontentable that snakes in captivity, such as bea constrictors, have often been seen in Ireland attached to circuises and menageries. These reptiles have been carefully tended, fed and kept at a proper temperature. It is an entirely dif-

Probably the best way to settle the snake quest on authoritatively would be to write to Trinity College, Dublin, to some Irish naturalist of acknowledged reputation. His decision in the matter should be final. G.

Says He Has Seen Them There. to the Snake Editor of The Evening World

There is no foundation in fact for the state neut that snakes cannot exist in Ireland, for they can and do exist, as I have seen them with my own eyes, and "seeing is believing." I am an Englishman, and while in Ireland some years ago made it a point, to investigate several of the popular superstitions, such as ghosts, banshees, leprechauns and suskes, and I assert positively that they all exist there to the present day.

An honest old farmer living on the banks

An honest old farmer living on the banks of the river Shannon, where it forms the boundary between the counties of Roscommon and Leitram, showed me a live snake which he had just captured in the fields. It was three feet long and almost as thick as my wrist, but did not have any range or rattles. He explained some of its peculiar habits, and declared it was equally at home on land or water. It had the faculty of putting the end of its fail in its mouth and emitting a shrill whiste for the purpose of alarming its young of its tail in its mouth and emitting a shrill whist e for the purpose of alarming its young when in danger, and could climb a stone ience like a good fellow.

It differs from American snakes in the fact that it prefers to build its nest in the blackthorn shrub, and not in holes in the rocks. My friend, the farmer, complained that the reptiles annoyed him by standing or poising themselves on their tails and sucking the milk from the cows in the fields. They also steal eggs and suck them and commit other petty depredations. They go down in holes in the ground at the beginning of Winter and hiberna's till Spring. The snake I saw had long cars. I do not know the species, although I was quite sober at the time was quite sober at the time ADAM B. IGLIE, 412 East Eightieth street.

No Rest for the Weary.

President Harrison (a little late at church. whispering to gentleman in pew behind him)— Will you kindly tell me the number of the will you kindly tell me the number of the hymn?

Gentleman in pew (eager to be of service)—
No. 784, Mr. President—exactly the number of signatures, by the way, to my petition for the Post-Office at Hopper's Mills, Mr. President, which I shall have the honor to present to you to-morrow. (Sotto voce) Bet $1,400 I get that office!

[From the Burlington Free Press.]
Mrs. Younghusband-You must be sure and come home promptly to dinner, this evening, lovey. I am going to treat you to my first batch of bread.

Mr. Younghusband (anxiously)—Can't you of bread.

Mr. Younghushand (anxiously)—Can't you wait until Thursday, sweetest? I have a very important engagement to-morrow.

He Was Under Outh.

[From the Springfield Republican,]
A witness in a case before the Superior Cours yesterday was being examined by Judge Wells, who asked him if he had not done so and so. The man replied that he had not. "Did you not tell me in my office that you had?" "I was talking on general principles then," responded the witness, "but now i am under oath."

Johann Hoff's Malt Extract THE BEST NUTRITIVE TONIC FOR

Dyspepsin, Indigestion, Nursing Mothers, the Weak and Debilitated. Put up in this I have used Johann Hoff's Male style of Bottles Extract for the past five years in my private practice, and have found it to be the best health-restoring beverage and tonic nutritive known. I have found it especially good for per-sons convalcacing from fever, in cases of dyspepsia, for mothers nursing, and in cases of weakly children, and also in lung treu-bles. My attention was drawn by the immense importation semi-monthly, and about a million of bottles imported by you have passed my in-spection in the Custom-House satis-factorily for the past five years.

Yours respectfully,

A Voyage to Mars.

MARVELLOUS ACCOUNT OF THE

PEOPLE AND CIVILIZATION OF ANOTHER PLANET.

The writer of the story narrates how he met Col. A.—, iste of the Confederate service, on a Hudson River boat. Casually they discussed siphers, and at the Colonel's house in New York the latter described a remarkable incident in his life. While shipwrecked on an island in the Pacific the sun was suddenly obscured by an apparent meteor, which fell on the island spreading ruin and devastation. The Colonel narrowity escaped, and examining the debris of the seeming meteor discovered a metallic case containing a peculiar manuscript in a mysterious cipher. This manuscript he gives the writer on condition that if he decipher and publishes it he shall concess the identity of the donor.

The try to Mars is undertaken in the "as-tonaut," a precularly constructed machine resembling a ship. The motive power is a newly discovered force called apergy. The voyage through space is the planet is uncessfully made and the intrapid traveller lands askely on Mars. The natives at first an automished, then asked him sead him the deady dragons and other means of wartare. He is rescued by the authority of a Martial personage o rank, who leads now he had been the hardy voyager from the South is presented to his lamily. Although treated with tip dessess his preciseally had a prisoner. Meanwhile he studies the language of Mars.

His host emighteens him as to why the Martian mob assented him, and then gave a resume of Martian hissery and customs.
